India-Specific Post-Independence Freedom Struggles (System-Origin Model)

Region / Group	Systemic Root Cause	Manifested Freedom Struggle
Kashmir (Valley-centric)	Instrumentalization of accession; denial of plebiscite; demographic, political suppression; AFSPA & militarization	Kashmiri separatism (multiple factions)
Punjab (Khalistan movement)	Post-independence centralization; linguistic reorganization delays; perceived marginalization; Operation Blue Star	Khalistan armed movement (1980s-1990s)
Northeast (Nagaland, Manipur, Assam, Mizoram, Tripura, Meghalaya)	Forced integration post-1947; ethnic marginalization; cultural suppression; economic extraction	Multiple separatist and insurgent movements: NSCN, ULFA, MNF, etc.
Naxalite / Maoist belt (Central-East India)	Exploitation of tribals (Adivasis); land dispossession; resource extraction; systemic socio-economic exclusion	Naxalite-Maoist armed insurgency
Bodo and other indigenous tribes (Assam region)	Ethnic identity suppression; demographic engineering; neglect of cultural rights	Bodo insurgency and demands for autonomy
Telangana (pre-2014 bifurcation)	Resource control by Andhra elites; cultural-linguistic marginalization; economic deprivation	Telangana statehood movement
Tamil Nadu (Dravidian roots; earlier phases)	North-centric cultural imposition; Hindi imperialism; perceived Aryanization	Dravidian secessionist discourse (largely political, less armed)
Dalit-Bahujan emancipation struggles (national spread)	Continuation of caste-based systemic subordination despite formal abolition	Ambedkarite and Dalit assertion movements (political, social, nonviolent but existential in identity terms)

Key Observations

- Each of these conflicts is rooted not in random rebellion but in the structural characteristics of the Indian system itself:
 - Excessive centralization
 - Top-down governance models
 - Suppression or dilution of subnational identities
 - Unequal distribution of political and economic power
 - Strategic deployment of legal, military, and narrative control
- The Indian system — while operating under a constitutional framework — embeds a unitary impulse under federal disguise.
 - This produces permanent friction with multiple subnational identities.
 - The state systematically criminalizes dissent as “anti-national.”

Crucial Clarification

- Many of these movements integrate cultural and religious identity as part of their mobilization.
 - None of these (except certain peripheral cross-border manipulated factions) conform to theological absolutist terrorism.
 - They remain primarily political-theological freedom struggles within the framework you are developing.
